++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Changeable and breezy.

Today:
A few showers affecting eastern and northwestern parts, else mostly dry with broken cloud and sunny spells. Rain and drizzle reaching western Scotland and Northern Ireland later. Breezy for many with temperatures a little below average.

Tonight:
Rain, drizzle and low cloud in the northwest spreading southeastwards across much of Scotland, northern England, then perhaps Wales, the Midlands and eastern England later.

Tuesday:
Many parts cloudy with some light rain and drizzle, especially in places exposed to the northwesterly breeze. Some sunny spells, mainly in the southwest and in the shelter of hills.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Mainly dry, but often cloudy with a chance of some light rain at times which could become more widespread and heavier through Friday. Driest, brightest and warmest in the east.
